Here East, London's leading technology and innovation campus, today welcomes its third cohort of Here East's Scholarship Programme recipients. Three students have been awarded full scholarships to the universities based on the East London campus through the Here East Scholarship Programme.

Focused on developing the next generation of talent in East London, the programme provides full undergraduate tuition and supporting loan supplements for prospective students living in the four growth boroughs surrounding the campus – Hackney, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest – with the students taking up places at Staffordshire University London and renowned media and performing arts institution, LMA.

William Camara from Hackney, Selcuk Kai Zorlu from Newham, and Fawad Mughal from Waltham Forest, have each been awarded a full scholarship of tuition fees and a maintenance loan supplement worth £2,700 per year, as well as facilitation of relevant work experience placements within the Here East business community and mentoring opportunities during the course of the degree.

This programme is open to students currently residing in East London, by the world-leading education institutions, businesses and individuals.

This is the third year of the scholarship programme. Here East scholars year, and are continuing to maximise the opportunity of their education on campus.

Fawad, who will be studying Cyber Security at Staffordshire University

"A few years ago, I set myself a target to go back to studies, but it was not easy. I always had a passion for which could make a difference for myself and for the community."
