committed to another five years. Park bosses say discussions are underway to introduce other new brands to the park.

In a statement, a spokesperson on behalf of the joint venture owners said: "It is fantastic that Mango has selected Castlepoint for its first store in the area. With the arrival of brands like Nike and Mountain Warehouse recently, we have first-hand experience of the draw that big-name fashion brands represent for our customer and the positive trading picture that Castlepoint experiences with each arrival is significant – we expect a similar effect when Mango opens its doors later this year.

"The letting is a further step on the journey we have been undertaking to diversify our tenant mix and better align it to both the wishes of our customer base and the positioning of Castlepoint as a leading South Coast retail hub. The strategy is working – customers are responding with their feet and Castlepoint's reputation is helping it to attract more big names, such as Mango, with other brands in advanced negotiations to follow suit."

The joint agents for Castlepoint are Morgan Williams and Curson Sowerby Partners LLP.
